

Disability Inclusion and Baby Box:

EU-SPS support to social protection related capacity development in Kyrgyzstan 2017-2018

Project Overview

The EU Social Protection Systems global programme supports capacity development for social protection in 4 Asian and 7 African countries.

In Kyrgyzstan, social worker curriculum development is the main focus of efforts to systematize capacity development for social protection. Based on an appraisal study that included a systematic background and problem analysis, stakeholder analysis, and SWOT analysis, and upon the request of the Kyrgyz Ministry for Labour and Social Affairs, the following activities were planned:

- 1) Training of trainers for university lecturers in disability inclusion and disability studies
- 2) Collaboration with international agencies for disability inclusion and mainstreaming, and
- 3) Pilot delivery of a disability-specific baby box.

Context

Persons with disabilities are one of the most vulnerable groups in Kyrgyzstan. The care system inherited from the Soviet era considered disabled children and adults as 'medically abnormal' and secluded them into closed institutions.

Despite the progress made towards a rights based approach and community and home based care persons with disabilities still have very little access to infrastructure, education, health and other social services. Even when receiving constitutionally guaranteed public services they often face violations of their rights and freedoms. They do not have personal assistants yet.

The most important factors restraining their access include poverty, lack of funding, lack of social workers, limited implementation of law even in public institutions and local government bodies, - largely as a result of weaknesses related to attitudes and professional knowledge.

Many persons with disabilities are not aware of their rights and responsibilities, and how to deal with legal problems. All these factors tend to lead to the isolation of persons with disabilities and their weak integration into society.

Objectives

The EU-SPS capacity development support in Kyrgyzstan aims at systematically integrating disability inclusion as a priority topic into social workers' and other social protection professionals' university education and in-service training. . The second objective is to test the feasibility and acceptability of a disability specific baby box in In the Kyrgyzstan context.

The specific objectives were:

- To incorporate disability inclusion in social workers' pre-service and in-service training, and training of trainers for the university lecturers who are going to carry this activity forward.
- To establish disability inclusion in the regulatory standards for social worker in-service and preservice training
- To mainstream disability in existing social worker capacity building programmes funded by other international agencies (EU, GIZ, etc.)
- To design and test the production and acceptability of a 'Baby Box' tailored to the needs of Kyrgyz families with disabled babies and mothers with disabilities.'

Approach: Walking the Talk

The most important method used in this project is active participation of local and Finnish disability experts in all the activities. The Abilis Foundation owned by Finnish disabled people's organizations (DPOs), together with their Kyrgyz partner Ravenstvo, were contracted to bring strategic leadership for the project. The Bishkek University of Humanities and the Osh State University have been the main implementing partners of the project. They are integrating disability inclusion curriculum into the training of social workers.

Results

The project produced teaching modules in Russian on disability inclusion. This production was a result of a fruitful collaboration with Kyrgyz university lecturers and disability activists. The modules contain among others interactive learning assignments, Kyrgyz-specific disability information, life stories of Kyrgyz persons with disabilities, and visual material links including video materials produced by a Finland funded UNDP-project in Kyrgyzstan.

The university lecturers, disability activists and collaboration partners have been trained to use the modules in their regular pre-service and in-service trainings for social workers but also other professionals such as medical doctors, social housing staff members, families and persons with disabilities themselves.

The EU-SPS has promoted disability inclusion also by helping to mainstream disability into the work of a large EU funded Budget Support project (and the related TA), through the involvement of the EU-SPS funded local disability expert. Her disability expertise and networks beyond Kyrgyzstan have been widely at the disposal of the EU-TA as well as for GIZ programmes in Kyrgyzstan.

100 baby boxes have been successfully delivered to mothers with disabilities and mothers of babies with disabilities. The mothers received psychological and peer support when receiving the boxes, which was even more important than the baby boxes themselves for many mothers. The Kyrgyz Ministry of Labour and Social Development has been satisfied with the Baby Box Pilot and has expressed an interest to continue this support to families with children with disabilities or mothers with disabilities. Discussions are ongoing on a potential continuation of this activity as part of the GIZ-funded Mother and Child Health Care Project.
